INDEX.

AUTHOR, her character, Page 2
Arminia, her bad taste, 19
Alcales and Palmyra, their story, 31
Aristobulus, how excusable, 62
Antipathy in nature not to be worn off, 67
Altizeera, much to be pitied 83
Amaranthus, his passion for Aminta, 87
Applause, how intoxicating, 91
Avarice, the worst of passions, 109
Adulphus, ruined by a dream, 114
Ambition has no bounds, 133
Actions unhappy, the true cause, 157
Aversion to solitude, a fault, 163
Adonius, his character, 184
Amadea, her causes for grief, 185
Abuse of thinking, worse than not thinking at all, 190
Adventure of a traveller, 194
Auctions greatly frequented, 208
Alvario, unhappy in his children, 220
Accomplishments, which most valuable, 243
Amasina, how made unhappy, 247
Armico, too hasty in his judgment, 255
Admiration, by what preserved, 266
Alithea, an instance of her generosity, 302
BLUE domino, cause of a sad mistake, 40
Brother, his distress, 42
Bloometta, her unhappy condition, 59
Bellair and Miseria, an ill matched couple, 72
Beau Belfont and Miss Tittup, the best wish can be made for them, 83
Bedlam, who fit for it, 130
Bellizo, her history, 146
Belinda, her adventures, 173
British ladies different from what they were formerly, 265
Beauty, hurt by ill-nature, 274
Body, how far influenced by the mind, 279
Benefits, the manner in which they ought to be conferred, 319
CLITANDER, successful in love-affairs, 12
Country ladies, easily seduced, 38
Caution, necessary in parents, 39
Clergyman, a remarkable instance of one, 54
Celinda, unfortunate in her love, 62
Cleora, a warning to her, 71
Cleophil, his ungenerous behaviour, 150
Caprice of a philosopher, 154
Climate of England the same as ever, 155
Contemplation, how pleasing in all stations, 161
Charleroy, madame, her adventure at the opera, 236
Crisis not to be neglected, 245
Compulsion, hateful to all reasonable beings, 286
Complaisance, always necessary, 313

DALINDA, her mean ſpirit, Page 69
Diſtruſt, a baſe paſſion, 109
Diverſion-mongers, very induſtrious, 216
Diſobedience, juſtly puniſhed, 234
Draxalla, an inſtance of ſelf-created wretchedneſs, 281
Dorimon, how reclaimed, 307
EUPHROSINE, her character, 4
Erminia, how ruined, 38
Effeminacy in the army cenſured, 85
Examples of unhappy marriages, 99
Elmira, an extraordinary caſe, 136
Elements, ſeldom blended equally, 289
Engliſh ladies, treated with too little reſpect, and wherefore, 237
Examination into ourſelves neceſſary, 272
FRENCH ladies, ſeldom make an ill uſe of liberty, 18
Flavia, her adventures, 47
Father, the ſordid contrivance of one, 105
Fidelio, his deſpair, 106
Fortune, the author and breaker of moſt friendſhips, 150
Free-will, not to be doubted, 194
France, the many innocent diverſions to be found there, 234
Fop, may be trifled with, 259
Fancy, never idle, 282
Favours, the merit of them leſſened by an ill manner of beſtowing, 320
GIRLS, naturally vain, 7
Generoſity of a lover, 45
Glory and love, not incompatible, 94
Gaming and gameſters, how treated, 118
Grant of our deſires often unhappy, 131
Good-breeding inferior to reputation, 157
Gaiety in exceſs, how to be corrected, 187
Gratitude, highly due to parents, 219
Good-nature, what it is, 267
Good-nature, and good-humour, in what they differ, 313
HUSBAND, the innocent ſtratagem of one, 28
Honour, an inſtance of it, 45
Home news, 83
Happineſs, doubly welcome after adverſity, 153
Hope ought to be encouraged, ib.
Hoydens, ſome naturally ſo, 265
JEALOUSY, the ſpite it occaſions, 35
Impertinence of ſome people, 58
Inſtance of public gratitude, 95
Imperio, a lover of beauty, 104
Impreſſion made by a dream, 124
Imperio, the mortification he gave a lady, 242
Inconſiſtencies in love, 243
Ill-nature, the ſource of it, 274
Infancy, a claim to tenderneſs, 275
KEY to the FEMALE SPECTATOR, forbid, 6
Kindneſs, ill repaid, 150

LOVE, when to be approved, Page 9
Liking, often taken for love, ib.
Luxury, the encouragement it finds, 25
Lindamira, her ſtory, 76
Lacroon, his character, 100
Lotteries, numerous of late, 118
Leolin and Elmira, their ſtory, 136
Lavallie, his amour with Belinda, 174
Loyter, count, an odd proceeding in him, 182
Letter of Sarah Oldfaſhion's, 213
Life, what time of it is beſt for improvement, 218
MIRA, her character, 4
Marteſia, her adventures, 10
Marriages, haſty, ſeldom happy, 11
Maſquerades, how prejudicial, 25
Macro, his brutality, 69
Mariana, a ſeaſonable warning to her, 70
Myrtano and Cleora, what may be expected from their union, 71
Miletta, her affected modeſty, 101
Mercator, his ſtory, 157
Manella, troubleſome in her conjugal affection, 174
Man, the dignity of his ſpecies, 194
Mind, delights in contemplation, 197
Montaubin, count, his ſtory, 201
Mode, not always to be followed, 219
Modeſty, the chief grace of women, 243
Mariamne, a play fatal to the author, 268
Manſlaughter, a new way of being guilty of it, 283
Meliſſa, a great coquette, 292
Myſtery, pleaſingly unravelled, 310
Montano, the manner of his conferring obligations, 318
NEGRATIA, her character, 20
Nothing certain till poſſeſſed, 103
Nature corrupted by the paſſions, 107
Numbers make their own misfortunes, 280
OVER-delicacy, cenſured, 85
PARENTS, ſometimes in fault, 17
Pride, when laudable, 56
Pompilius, his marriage, why blamed, 60
Philimont and Daria, their capricious deſtiny, 69
Peace, a promoter of finikins, 89
Panthea, her ſad dilemma, 105
Poſterity, how far to be regarded, 122
Paſſions, duly regulated, of ſervice to us, 132
Philoſopher, his remark, 154
Pantomimes, how uſeful, 210
Poetry, not enough encouraged, 264
Pretences, various, for ill humour, 278
Patience, an extraordinary example, 280
QUESTION proper to be aſked, 27
Quarrels between married people, matter of ridicule for others, 179

RINALDO, his disappointment, Page 55
Rules observed by the FEMALE SPECTATOR, 57
Rebecca Facemend, her bill, 85
Resolve, the obstinacy of one, 140
Regret, an instance of it, 152
Recollection necessary, 162
Ranelagh too much frequented, 165
Respect, how attracted, 243
Religion, when real, excites good-nature, 273
Royal example of generosity, 286
SEOMANTHE, her story, 20
Sympathy of humours requisite to make marriage happy, 73
Source, the true one of our calamities, 156
Solitary life hated by most, 162
Socrates, an instance that virtue is to be acquired by application, 187
Sarcasm of a lady to an apostate patriot, 191
Sneer of a son on his father's marrying a very young wife, 192
Subscriptions intended for masquerades at Ranelagh, 239
Stage affords the noblest diversion, 262
Softness, the most prevailing aims of women, 276
Sceptic confesses too much without he confessed more, 285
Surinthus, his surly friendship, 317
TENDERILLA, her romantic turn, 7
True love unchangeable, 9
Temptations overcome are pleasures, 56
Tempo-Amiarians, what they are, 57
Tulip, Mrs. her folly, 68
Tennis, a manly exercise, 120
Timoleon, his character, 135
Trial of a lover, 150
Tragedy, its intent, 210
Taste, the difference of the false and the true taste, 212
Talpack ladies, their habits may probably become our mode, 265
Thaumantius, a great valetudinarian, 280
VAUX-HALL, the temple of Flora, 47
Vulpone, his strange success, 76
Unity among kindred recommended, 115
Vizards, when worn at the theatres, 261
Virago, how ridiculous, 274
Vapours, an epilepsy of the mind, 283
WORLD, the ridicule of it on unsuitable matches, 59
Women, why fond of military gentlemen, 94
Wife of a late general, her behaviour, 95
Whist, the game much admired, 217
Widow, her reason for marrying, 166
Widow, her rambling humour, 168
XEUXIS, a consummate hypocrite, 134
YOUTH and age disagreeable to each other, 82

THE END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.